SAMPLE WORKS CITED PAGE

Works Cited

Brown, Alan S. The Déjà vu Experience: Essays in Cognitive Psychology. New York:

Psychology, 2004. Print.

---. "The Déjà vu Illusion." Current Directions in Psychological Science 13.6 (2004): 256-59.

Print.

Carey, Benedict. "Déjà vu: If It All Seems Familiar, There May Be a Reason." New York Times

14 Sept. 2004: F1+. LexisNexis. Web. 11 Nov. 2007.

Flora, Carlin. "Giving Déjà vu Its Due." Psychology Today Mar.-Apr. 2005: 27. Academic Search Premier. Web. 7 Nov. 2007.

Johnson, C. "A Theory on the Déjà vu Phenomenon." 8 Dec. 2001. Web. 20 Nov. 2007.

Lemonick, Michael D. "Explaining Déjà vu." Time 20 Aug. 2007. Academic Search Premier.

Web. 5 Dec. 2007.

- The first entry by Brown is a book citation.
- The second, also by Brown, is from a journal in print.
- The Carey entry is an article from a newspaper.
- The Flora entry is an article from a journal found through an online subscription search engine.
- The Johnson entry is a website.
- Finally, the Lemonick entry is an article from a magazine found through an online subscription search engine.

➢ Whenever two dates are listed in an entry, the first date is the copyright date and the second date is the date of access (day which you viewed the information online).
➢ Double space and use a "hanging indent."

PLEASE NOTE the new MLA changes. 1. Include the word "Print" or "Web" at the end of each entry to let the reader know the medium of the publication. 2. Do not include the website address unless the reader would have trouble finding the source without the URL or the instructor requires it. (See page 182 in the seventh edition of the MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers.) 3. Italicize titles instead of underlining them.

Helpful Websites for MLA Works Cited

www.citationmachine.net

www.knightcite.com

www.easybib.com

Helpful Websites for Writing

www.umuc.edu/ewc   (Offers a plagiarism tutorial)

http://owl.english.purdue.edu

http://grammar.ccc.commnet.edu/grammar

For a template for a paper already set up in the MLA format, go to the Office button, choose Open, and look in the P drive in the data folder. Then choose MLA Templates and open the MLA paper template. P:\Data\MS Templates